

Spring 2020 Newsletter

While cancellations are abundant and priorities have shifted, fire season still approaches. The Association for Fire Ecology has compiled a helpful list of current information and resources on COVID-19, especially as it relates to wildland fire management. It will be continuously updated- bookmark it! We wish you a healthy and safe season!

Virtual Learning Opportunities

Webinars

Apr 15: Ecology, history, ecohydrology, & management of PJ woodlands in the Great Basin

Apr 15: Forest & Fire Learning Series - the virtual sessions from Mountain Studies Institute

Apr 29: Southwest Fire Season 2019 Overview and 2020 Outlook

Virtual Conference

Apr 20-23: 3rd International Smoke Symposium (IAWF) will be completely virtual and scholarships are available (scholarship deadline April 10)

Check out Recent Newsletters from Partner Organizations

Wildland Fire Management RD&A

Western Region Cohesive Strategy

We are working with partners to schedule more webinars to make our usual series a bit more robust for the current virtual need. If you have relevant and management applicable research OR a management case study you'd like to share, please contact us about presenting a webinar! swfireconsortium@gmail.com

Recent Publications

"Effects of restoration and fire on habitats and populations of western hummingbirds: A literature review," Alexander, et al. 2020.

"The effect of scale in quantifying fire impacts on species habitats," Wan et al. 2020.

"Fire regimes and structural changes in oak-pine forests of the Mogollon Highlands ecoregion: Implications for ecological restoration," Huffman, et al.

Note- many journals are relaxing access due to COVID-19. If you have trouble, contact first authors or journals directly.*

